

Trademark Complaint Procedure – Terms of Use

Inspiration Software Inc.'s www.inspiration.com web site (the "Site") provides space for third parties and/or users to post content and Materials to the Site, however, Inspiration is not in a position to arbitrate disputes between the parties who post content or Materials to the Site and trademark owners. Our Terms of Use (a copy of which is available on the Inspiration.com website) provides that third parties and other users of the Site who post content or Materials to the Site are responsible for any content that they choose to use in their postings to the Site. We encourage trademark owners to resolve their disputes directly with third parties, in part, because such third parties and other users may post similar content and/or Materials on other web sites.

Inspiration Software Inc. ("Inspiration") is willing to perform a limited investigation of reasonable complaints provided the complainant follows the procedures and provides information requested below.

Trademark owners must identify and submit the exact URL(s) on the Site in which the alleged trademark infringement occurs. Inspiration will not investigate the trademark in any other URLs.

When we receive a trademark complaint, we only investigate the use of the trademark in the content and/or Materials located in the URL(s) identified in the complaint. If a third party or other Site user is wrongfully posting the trademark on the Site or in Materials where appropriate we will require the third party or other user to remove it and will prevent them from using it on the Site or in Materials in the future.

If you are a trademark owner (or trademark owner's representative) and object to any third party's or other user's posting of a trademark or a term corresponding to your trademark on the Site, or in Materials accessible on the Site that is consistent with the foregoing, Inspiration requests that you fill out and submit the following information:
